

How to Draw a Butterfly

You need: a pencil, an eraser, black pen or a darker pencil, crayons or coloured pencils

1. Draw the body

2. Add the left top wing

3. Add the right top wing

4. Draw the left bottom wing

5. Draw the right bottom wing

6. Add the face

7. Draw the feelers

8. Finish and clean up

How to Draw a Butterfly

1. Draw the body

Draw a tall, narrow oval in the middle for the butterfly's body.

2. Add the left top wing

Draw the large top wing on the left. Start near the top of the body, curve out wide, then bring the line back to meet the body at the middle.

3. Add the right top wing

Draw the matching large top wing on the right. Curve it out and back in so it meets the body at the middle.

4. Draw the left bottom wing

Draw the smaller bottom wing on the left. Start at the middle beside the body, curve down and around, then come back up near the lower body.

5. Draw the right bottom wing

Draw the matching bottom wing on the right. Curve it down and around, then bring it back to the body.

6. Add the face

Draw two filled circles for the eyes and a small smiling curve underneath.

7. Draw the feelers

Draw two long curved feelers going up from the head. Add a small circle at the end of each one.

8. Finish and clean up

Go over the butterfly outline, face, and feelers with darker lines. Rub out the pale dotted guides when you are done.

Tips

- Keep the top wings bigger than the bottom wings.
- If one wing looks different, gently adjust the curve until both sides feel balanced.
- Draw the guide shapes lightly so they are easy to rub out.