

How to Draw a Flower

You need: a pencil, an eraser, black crayons or markers, paper

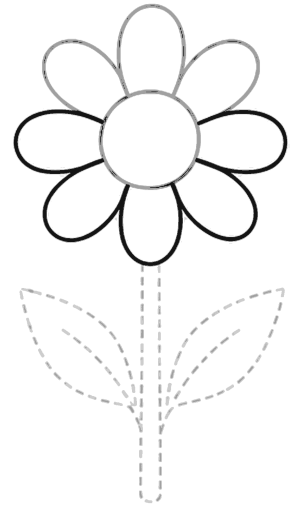

1. Draw the middle circle

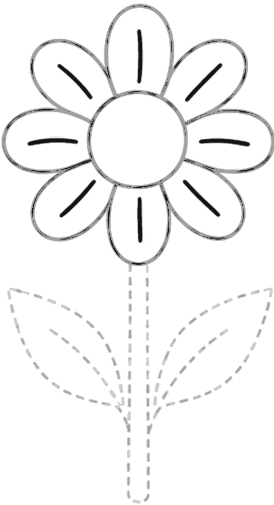

2. Add three top petals

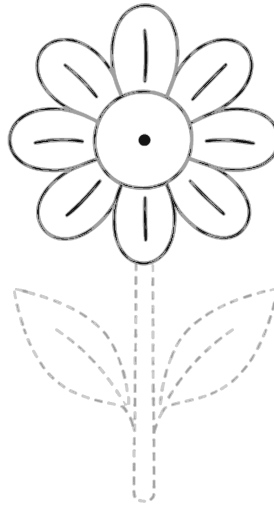

3. Finish the outer petals

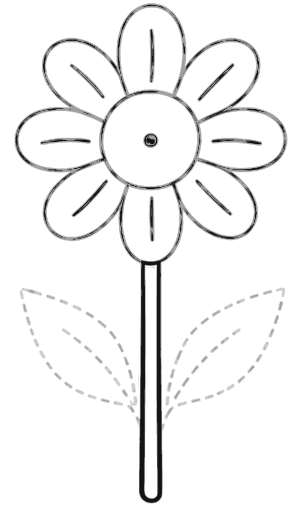

4. Draw petal lines

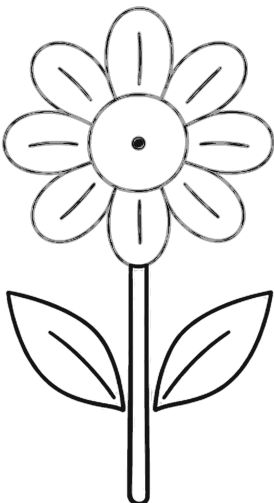

5. Add the center dot

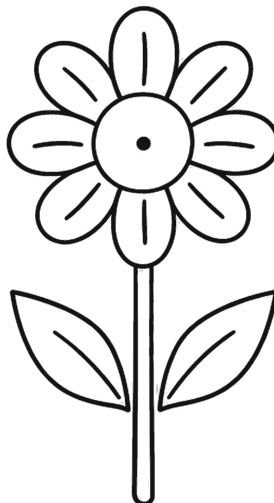

6. Draw the stem

7. Add both leaves

8. Trace and rub out guides

How to Draw a Flower

1. Draw the middle circle

Draw a neat round circle in the middle of the flower head. Use the dotted petal, stem, and leaf guides only to help place it.

2. Add three top petals

Draw the top middle petal first, then add one rounded petal on each side of it. Each petal starts at the center circle and curves back down to it.

3. Finish the outer petals

Draw the five remaining petals around the lower half and sides of the circle. Follow the dotted shapes to keep the petals rounded and even.

4. Draw petal lines

Add one short line inside each petal. Place each line near the middle of the petal, following its direction.

5. Add the center dot

Draw a small filled circle in the middle of the large center circle. Keep it tiny and neat.

6. Draw the stem

Draw two straight lines down from the bottom petal to make the stem. Round the bottom end so the stem looks smooth.

7. Add both leaves

Draw one large pointed leaf on each side of the stem. Then draw one curved line inside each leaf for the vein.

8. Trace and rub out guides

Go over all the lines you want to keep. Then rub out the pale dotted guides so the flower looks clean and finished.

Tips

- Keep the petals close in size for a balanced flower.
- Draw the guide shapes lightly so they are easy to rub out.
- Round the ends of the petals to keep the flower soft and simple.