How to Draw a Fox

1. Draw the body oval

Draw a large slanted oval in the middle for the fox's body. Tilt it down to the right, just like the picture.

2. Add the head circle

Draw a round circle for the head at the top left of the body. Let the circle touch the body oval.

3. Make two tall ears

Draw two tall pointy ears on top of the head. Add one short line inside the ear on the right.

4. Shape the face and chest

Draw the long snout from the left side of the head and add the small nose at the tip. Then draw the furry chest under the head with two soft points and a curved line back toward the body.

5. Draw the front legs

Draw the front leg straight down from the chest and round the paw at the bottom. Add two short toe lines, then draw the second front leg behind it with a long narrow line.

6. Add the back leg

Draw a big curved back leg under the body. Finish it with a rounded paw and a few short toe lines.

7. Draw the bushy tail

Draw the large curled tail behind the fox, starting near the back leg and sweeping up and around. Add the zigzag line near the tip to show the fluffy tail marking.

8. Finish the fox

Go over the lines you are keeping, including the eye and the small curved line on the head. Rub out the dotted guide shapes so the fox looks clean and finished.

Tips

- Keep the first guide shapes light so they are easy to rub out.
- Point the ears upward to help the fox look alert.
- Make the tail large. Fox tails look extra fluffy and full.
