How to Draw a Turtle

1. Draw the shell

Draw a big wide oval for the turtle's shell. It sits in the middle and is a little flatter along the bottom.

2. Add the head

Draw a round head on the left side of the shell. Let the circle touch and slightly overlap the shell.

3. Draw the front leg

Draw the front leg under the left side of the shell. Make it long and rounded, with a wider foot at the bottom.

4. Draw the back leg

Draw the back leg under the right side of the shell. Shape it like a rounded flap with a soft curved foot.

5. Add the middle leg

Draw the small middle leg under the shell near the front. Use a short line down, a curved foot, and a line back up.

6. Draw the face and leg

Add a dot for the eye and a small curved smile on the head. Then draw the inner right leg under the shell with a short slant, a rounded foot, and a line up.

7. Add the tail

Draw a small pointed tail sticking out from the right side of the shell. Use two curved lines that meet in a soft point.

8. Finish the turtle

Go over the turtle's outline with darker lines you want to keep. Rub out the pale dotted guides to leave a clean finished turtle.

Tips

- Keep the shell nice and big so the legs fit underneath.
- Draw the dotted guide shapes lightly so they are easy to rub out.
- Round feet make the turtle look soft and friendly.
